Not Guilty of Aiding in Getting Evidence for Divorce

(Associated Press)
ATLANTA, Ga., April 12—Chief of Police James L. Beavers, the storm center of municipal politics here for a decade, was found guilty by the police committee early today for neglect of duty and swearing falsely and was removed from office.

He was found not guilty of a third count which charged him with aiding and procuring evidence of a divorce case in connection with the arrest of Mrs. Candler, wife of the millionaire soft drink manufacturer, here last February.

The committeemen governing the board of the police department which filed the charges and before which Beavers was tried, reached a verdict shortly after three o'clock this morning, following an all-night session of the trial, which developed sensational testimony concerning Beavers' connection with the Candler case.

Immediately upon being informed of the verdict, Beavers announced through his counsel he would seek a writ of certiorari in superior court today, reinstating him to office until his case can be tried in the courts.

The charges were filed against Beavers on March 25 by Ed H. Inman, chairman of the police committee, who was suspended from all duty the same day.

He was specifically accused of failure to make periodic inspection of beats as required by law and swearing falsely to a pauper's oath to evade court costs in former ouster proceedings against him.

EVELYN NESBIT TO FIGHT HARRY THAW

(Associated Press)
PHILADELPHIA, April 12—Evelyn Nesbit, divorced wife of Harry K. Thaw, today filed in common pleas court a petition to be allowed to intervene in the proceedings to determine Thaw's sanity by jury trial, which begins here next Monday.

The action, it is stated, is in the interest of her 12 year old son, Russell William Thaw.

The petition sets forth that Thaw should not be released as he is mentally unfit and will, if released, dissipate his estate and the life interest in his father's estate.

Thaw's estate is estimated to be worth about $1,000,000.

PLANS RECEIVED FOR CLUBHOUSE

The new plans for the remodeling of the Valley Country club house were received Saturday from the Harry J. Frahn company, of Nashville, by Charles Rountree president of the club. Mr. Rountree said that the club house, when remodeled according to the plans, would be worth $20,000 in addition to the value of the present building.

The plans exhibited provide for the retention of the Colonial front as it now appears. There will be considerable additions made to the ends of the house with wide drive ways provided. The balcony in front will be enlarged. There will be an open court inside the building, and a number of new rooms added. Mr. Rountree said that for the present, only the dining room, kitchen and club room would be completed.

At a meeting to be held soon of the stockholders of the club, it is expected that work will be ordered to begin on the building.

BIDS ARE ASKED FOR STREETS OF ALBANY

Bids are advertised by the Albany city council for the paving of Third avenue West. Without objection the ordinance providing for the paving of that avenue passed at the council meeting of Friday night.

Third avenue some years ago, was paved in part. Some of the stone foundations were laid. Soon after those foundations were laid, court actions enjoined the city, and not until several months ago was the city free to agree to new specifications for the avenue.

It was stated that practically the same kind of paving will be used on Third avenue as is now being placed on several other streets and avenues of the city. The Alabama Traction company's street car lines traverse a part of third avenue.

Two Printers Are Robbed by Bandits

ATLANTA, April 12—Four masked bandits early today bound and gagged the watchman at the plant of a local printing concern and after locking him in a small room, escaped in an automobile with $20,000 worth of state tobacco tax stamps.

WASHINGTON, April 12—The soldier bonus bill passed by the house was agreed to with minor changes today by the senate finance committee and ordered reported to the senate.

It provides for cash payment for veterans not entitled to more than $50 in adjusted compensation and for 20 year endowment life insurance policies to others.

Chairman Smoot said he would report the measure to the senate Monday. No formal vote was taken today. Mr. Smoot announcing the report was ordered by general consent.

Senator Simmons, North Carolina ranking democrat on the committee, announced he would propose an amendment on the floor of the senate to make full cash payments an option of the bill.

HIGH PRAISE GIVEN SOLICITOR ALMON

High praise for the work of Solicitor D. C. Almon, of the eighth circuit is given in a news dispatch published in this morning's Birmingham Age-Herald from its state capital bureau at Montgomery. The dispatch follows: (State Capital Bureau)

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 12—Solicitor D. C. Almon, who prosecutes for the state of Alabama in Morgan county and vicinity, has a record for securing convictions which is way above the average, according to reports received at the office of Attorney General Harwell G. Davis. A report covering his activities for the last month in Limestone county showed that he secured convictions in 88 per cent of the cases tried. When it is considered that the average proportion of convictions secured in Alabama is 52 per cent, it will be seen that Solicitor Almon is out of the ordinary class.

Another Solicitor whose record for the last month showed up well is B. G. Wilson. Reports on his service in Marengo county showed convictions in 66 per cent of all cases tried.

Solicitor C. H. Vann, fifth judicial circuit, in a recent report filed with the attorney general showed that there has been a material decrease in crime in his circuit in recent months.

Central Will Play Florence Saturday

Central High plans to open the local baseball season next Saturday at Malone park with Coffee high of Florence. Central split even in two games with St. Bernard this week losing the first 3-2 and winning the last 4-2. Pepper and Ezell worked on the hill for the local team.

The season is just opening and it is hard to pick the stars for the year but the work of Burns at third base and that of Maness in the out field and Handy as receiver stood out above the rest. Burns was instrumental in a pair of double killings, one of which almost resulted in a triple death. Maness and Handy wielded a heavy club the latter getting three hits and the former two.

The local school is looking forward to a good season and games have been arranged with high school outfits throughout the territory.

MEININGER MAKES SPLENDID TALK

Urges the Students to Realize Importance of Citizenship

Hundreds of school children from this and neighboring communities this morning took advantage of the hospitality of the chamber of commerce and viewed the film "The Road to Happiness" at the Princess theater as guests of the civic organization.

The film is one which was shown several days ago at a private showing and endorsed by representatives of the Pastors' Union. It shows the advantages of good roads to a community and the students of the schools today indicated deep interest in the problem of better highways. The distinguished cast participating in the film was headed by President Calvin Coolidge.

Preceding the film, W. J. Meininger secretary of the Albany-Decatur chamber of commerce, delivered a short address. He told the students they are the future men and women of the county and will be the ones who will decide the problems of community development within a few years.

The chamber of commerce, he said, wanted them to realize the importance of good roads, the duties of good citizenship, including loyalty to the Sunday schools, the churches, the civic organizations and all things which make for a better city and a better citizenship. He stressed the obligations of the students to their schools, to their teachers and in their daily studies.

The film will be shown at the Princess at two o'clock this afternoon and continuously until 11 o'clock tonight.

Pleasing Program Given by Pupils

The literary and musical program of Friday night as given at the Albany high school auditorium by pupils of Miss Gladys Bernardi and Mrs. Joe Pettey was greatly enjoyed by the large audience. There were twenty three numbers on the program and not one of them but very interesting and splendidly rendered. Piano solos and readings followed each other without a hitch until the last of the pleasing numbers was given. Mrs. Pettey and Miss Bernardi and their pupils were warmly congratulated on the success of the entertainment.

FORGERY CHARGES LEAD TO ARREST

Declares Blackmailers Seeking Money Were Cause of Exposure

(Associated Press)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 12—The wife of a carpenter in the daytime and the bride of a wealthy banker at night, Mrs. Anna Beswick, 50, today awaited a hearing on charges of forgery, which, in an alleged confession given out by the police, she said was forced to commit, to obtain money for blackmailers who had threatened to expose her dual life.

Apparently neither Samuel E. Beswick, by whom she said she had 18 children, nor William C. Martin, vice president of a suburban bank, whom she declared she had married last February and from whom she said she had taken at least $50,000 to pay for blackmailers' silence, knew of her double life.

Mrs. Beswick, who was arrested yesterday outside the courtroom of Judge J. Willis Martin, whose name she is alleged to have forged to letters, through which it is charged she obtained $5,000 from William Shuman and Ralph Hawthorne who had the warrants issued for her arrest.

Mrs. Beswick named Herbert Russe, John McCoy and Irwin Hamilton as her blackmailers. They were arrested on charges of extortion, conspiracy and blackmail. Mrs. Beswick said they had learned of her double life from driving her in a taxicab from the modest home of the children and their father to the more pretentious residence of Martin.

Mr. Martin appeared stunned when summoned to the district attorney's office and said Mrs. Beswick had gotten a lot of money from him but could not state the exact amount.

IMMIGRATION BILLS BEFORE CONGRESS

(Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, April 12—The house today approved provisions of the Johnson immigration bill which would fix quotas of two per cent based on the 1890 census. Under the existing law which expires June 30, next, quotas are three per cent based on the 1910 census.

(Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, April 12—An internal issue of grave importance confronted both the senate and house today when they took up, with expectation of action before adjournment, the pending immigration proposals, which would, in effect, exclude Japanese from the United States.

The house, after disposing of minor amendments to the Johnson bill at a night session, had before it the vigorously contested quote and Japanese sections and the senate resumed consideration of amendments to its immigration measure, having a similar purpose with reference to admission of Japanese.

Japan's formal protest against its exclusion from the list of nations allotted immigration quotas overshadowed discussion, having loomed yesterday in the note from Ambassador Hanibara, warning of grave consequences enactment of the Japanese provisions "would inevitably bring," and setting forth concretely, for the first time, the terms of the gentlemen's agreement of 1907. The note was sent to Chairman Colt of the Senate immigration committee by Secretary Hughes, with comments that the statement of the gentlemen's agreement "corresponds with by own understanding of that arrangement."

2 FARM MEASURES ARE GIVEN APPROVAL

(Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, April 12—Two farm measures, the McNary-Haughen bill for establishment of a farm export corporation, and the Norris bill, for purchase and sale of farm products, were ordered favorably reported by the senate agricultural committee.

Several amendments were attached to the bill before it was given approval.

Favorable report on the McNary-Clark forestry bill, drafted after several months of investigation and designed to conserve the country's forest reserve, was voted today by the agriculture committee.

Ford Is Silent on Political Course

(Associated Press)
DETROIT, April 12—Henry Ford has been asked by William A. C. Stock, chairman of the democratic state central committee, to state definitely his political intentions as a result of his endorsement at Monday's state-wide primary for president on the democratic ticket.

The request, made three days ago, remained unanswered today.

BLAMES PINCHOT FOR "BUTTING IN"

Senator Watson States Pennsy's Governor Suggested Heney

(Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 12—Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania, who has sharply criticized national prohibition enforcement, suggested the employment of Francis J. Heney as counsel for the senate committee investigating the internal revenue bureau, Senator Watson republican, Indiana, chairman of that committee declared today in the senate.

Senator Watson said he was not at liberty to repeat conversations but he had learned upon indisputable evidence that Governor Pinchot had thrust himself into the controversy between Senator Cozens of Michigan, prosecutor for the committee, and Secretary Mellon.

Differences between President Coolidge and senate democrats have developed toward an open breach. In addition to the President's vigorous message, admonishing it to confine the activities of its committees within constitutional and legal rights, the senate has before it two resolutions relating to the inquiry.

One by chairman Watson, republican, Indiana, proposes discharge of the committee and another by Senator Jones, of New Mexico, a democratic member, proposes authority to employ counsel.

To Cite Daugherty.
CHICAGO, April 12—Senator Wheeler, of Montana, a central figure in the Daugherty investigation, declared today that Mal S. Daugherty brother of the former Attorney General, would be cited for contempt before the senate.

Commenting on the results of a sub-committee visit to Washington Courthouse yesterday to take further testimony in the Daugherty case, the Montana senator declared the challenge to the inquisitorial body would be brought to the attention of the senate.

"The department of justice has been operating for several years as the collection agency for campaign contributions for the republican party and it is that condition the investigation in Washington is designed to correct. Despite every obstacle, we shall work to that end."

"Mr. Stone, the new attorney general, has impressed the committee favorably. To a great degree the further future course of the investigation will depend upon the action of the new chief."

"The spy system built up during the war, maintained and added to since, is now threatening the functions of government."

Sinclair Answers.

WASHINGTON, April 12—The authority of the senate to ask him the questions which resulted in contempt proceedings against him were attacked today by Harry F. Sinclair in a demurrer filed here in answer to his contempt indictment.

The demurrer followed in the main the legal contentions advanced by the Sinclair lawyers when the oil magnate and leasee of Teapot Dome last appeared before the senate oil committee and refused to reply to a long string of questions on the ground that the investigators were without authority and that his evidence could be reserved for the courts.

THE WOMAN WHO INSPIRED AN IMMORTAL LOVE SONG DIED UNLOVED

In an obscure corner in a newspaper of last Sunday appeared the death notice of the woman who had inspired the immortal love song: "Silver Threads Among the Gold." One naturally would suppose that the woman in question passed away amid comfort and surrounded by loving care. But such was not the case, according to the news story, which is in part as follows:

Alone in a Brooklyn rooming house, Mrs. Harriett Danks, who inspired the love song "Silver Threads Among the Gold," found relief Wednesday night from a life in which sentiment and realities were strangely juggled.

The woman of 82 died estranged from her husband for many years by the very song that she had inspired, and so obscurely had she lived in latter years that her death did not become known until today.

"Silver Threads Among the Gold" was written by her husband, Hart P. Danks, who also died alone in a Philadelphia lodging house in 1903. He was then estranged from his wife, to whom, in 1874, he had composed the love song which swept the country.

After Dank's death, lawsuits over royalties from the song brought the estrangement of Mrs. Danks from her three children.

It is only fair to assume that real affection existed between Mr. and Mrs. Danks in 1874. It was stated in one part of the news story that in 1903 came the estrangement between Danks and his wife—only 29 years after the love of the two had inspired a great song. It appears that like riches, love itself may take "wings and fly away."

It is said the song itself caused the death of love between the couple—"the woman of 82 estranged from her husband for many years by the very song she had inspired."

But the news writer must not have meant for this sentence to be taken too literally, for it is unthinkable that as beautiful a song as "Silver Threads Among the Gold" could estrange anybody. Further on in the news story it is said trouble over royalties from the great song estranged Mrs. Danks from her three children—in other words, the "gold" connected with the song's success caused mother and children to fall out.

And so, it is fair to assume that it was money—the love of it—that killed the divine love as between Mr. and Mrs. Danks.

But what ever separated the once ardent lovers, one lesson from their sad story is, that even love itself may give way to dislike and even to hate in the kind of world we live in.

It is perhaps true that either Mr. or Mrs. Danks or both of them, felt that justice had not been dealt out to either. If they did so feel, then it is easy to see how their love faded away, for stern justice will be served. The demands of stern justice must be satisfied as between the dearest lovers or else estrangement will come just as it did to the heads of the Danks family and to their children.

COMMENT ON THE DAWES REPARATIONS COMMITTEE REPORT

Most comment on the report of the commission of which General Dawes was America's leading member, named to seek a settlement of the ugly business of getting the Germans to pay their war indemnity are favorable in this country. The final comment with most writers, however, is that the report furnishes no means of giving the Germans a will to pay their war debts. One favorable thing in the report that would seem to hasten a movement on the part of the Germans to pay is the suggestion that put down the amounts of their war debts.

said General Dawes' report recommends that Germany be loaned $200,000,000 and that her first payment of war indemnity be about $27,500,000.

There is no cut in the amounts to be paid by Germany on the war debt, the amount remaining the same as at the close of the war, the commission claiming it had no power to change the Versailles treaty.

It is generally believed the report will give the Germans a free hand in the Rhur Valley, but no demand is made that the French retire from the Rhur.

It is said none of the penalty clauses of the Versailles treaty against which the Germans of the Fatherland have contended, have been changed by the commission. Some say that Germany may reject the whole plan of the Dawes committee.

The amount of hard work necessary to the completion of the report as done by the committee in three months time, has tended to gain a world of sympathy for the committeemen. One expressed purpose of the committee is as follows:

Our plan is based upon this principle—the reconstruction of Germany is not an end in itself; it is only part of the larger problem of the reconstruction of Europe.

It is pointed out that this observation will be taken to mean that the commission is playing no favorites. It is seeking to restore all Europe, not at the expense of any one country of Europe.

If such a principle can be adhered to in good faith by all the countries concerned, then the final settlement of the aftermath of the World war, while not near at hand, may be confidently expected "some sweet day"

For the Sabbath and Other Days A Train Of Thoughts

By J. E. Blair

Correct appearance indicates a correct person. One who has no pride of appearance might be a great worker, a great scholar or even a great artist, but such a one never was a great person. Just as the lapwing "gets himself another crest" and just as a "redder crimson comes upon the robin's breast," just so the red-blooded seemingly people of our race clothe themselves in fine garments, if they can. John Wanamaker, the merchant prince, once said in one of his incomparable advertisements, that correct garments produce a satisfaction second only to religious ecstasy. However poverty-stricken the speaker, he cannot afford to appear before an audience poorly clad. And however poor an audience, its members do not wish to listen to a poorly dressed man or woman. Pleasing garments are so attractive that it is a jealous person indeed, who forgets the beauty of good clothes long enough to feel envious of their wearers.

But everybody resents a slovenly person. There is a deep significance in the resentment felt by that good man in the Bible parable against the "friend" who appeared at the marriage feast not wearing "the wedding garment."

Love dictated his words when the "father" demanded that the best garment be worn by the "Prodigal Son" and that a ring be put upon his finger.

What shall we say, then, since beauty in appearance is demanded? Just this: That God's world is one of beauty and that instinctively right-minded men and women feel that those who do not at least TRY for beauty in appearance are definitely out of harmony with the eternal fitness of things and are therefore "persona non grata."

But Wanamaker put right garments second to "religious ecstasy." Why so? Well, our world is first of all, NOT one of beauty—but it is a world of STRUGGLE, if haply its inhabitants may triumph over the evil in the world and in their own hearts. This world is not one of flowery beds. "No, we must fight if we would win." Life is warfare. The world is a broad field of battle. So finally, in addition to as good appearance as possible—and more important than that—is the ability to fight the good fight of faith.

In a word—the homely adage "Handsome is who handsome does" teaches the second lesson. And St. Paul in Philippians, 6th chapter, tells something about the clothing and fighting equipment necessary to BE right, as well as to "look good," as follows: "Stand, therefore, having your loins girded about with the truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness; and your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace; and above all, taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked; and take the helmet of salvation and the sword of the Spirit which is the Word of

GREAT CROWDS HEAR CHIEF WHITE EAGLE

Great crowds gathered at the Albany Drug Co., each night to hear Chief White Eagle who has arrived here from far west Oklahoma and to hear him lecture and tell about his tribe of Indians, the Cherokees. The chief is advertising his Indian Sennatoe. This has been placed with the Albany Drug Co., and always will be sold there. He says Indians outlive every other nation. If we get sick we take God's medicine, which is made out of herbs and was placed in this earth for his people to use. You never saw an Indian with consumption or rheumatism. The Albany Drug Co. is selling more of the chief's medicine than any other.

Dr. White Eagle is one of the chiefs of the Cherokee Indian tribe and was born and raised on a ranch in Oklahoma; and was graduated from the Laurence Indian college at Chickasha, Oklahoma.

His family consists of a squaw, the Indian Princess, who is with him, and a daughter who lives in Idaho. He is fond of and loves horses, dogs, flowers and music, but says that he loves his poor old squaw better than anything else in this world.

Although very far away from their native territory, they feel very much at home in the south. "We like Albany and Decatur people," the chief says, "and they are good, kind people, have been good to us, and we are doing a fine business here and are making many friends."

Some of our very best citizens, are testifying to the great virtue of White Eagle's medicine. He has placed with Albany Drug Co., all his remedies and if you are troubled with rheumatism, stomach trouble, constipation, don't fail to get a bottle of the Indian senna tone $1 bottle and be cured. If you are not benefitted, your money will be returned. Don't complain any longer but be healed with God's own medicine.—Advt.

The Amazing Favor Mrs. Marks Begged of Madge.

MECHANICALLY I rose from my chair and bade the hurrying Mrs. Marks good-by. From somewhere I pumped up a smile and an apparently cordial invitation to come again, as I closed the door and she went.

For a long time I stood motionless, trying to reconstruct my opinions which my neighbor's talk had shattered.

Every conjecture I had made concerning Dicky and Madge's relationship had been confirmed. She was the girl who had bound up his head when he had been wounded in some mysterious adventure. He had come up to the city as soon as he had left her and his treatment of Mrs. Marks had changed from a suppliant tolerance to cordial friendliness.

Madge, I felt, was curious enough, her rough dress of Dicky and her emphatic assurance that I would have approved his action of that night, quashed my suspicions and changed the current of my thought.

I found myself wishing that I had not been so caustic in my language to my husband. Useless that wish now, however. It would take some time for Dicky to recover from the royal rage in which he had rushed out of the apartment. That he was not irrevocably angry, I knew as well as that some time before midnight he would telephone to see if Lillian had arrived.

Madge Is Remorseful.
I am not especially timid, yet there is something about the house which makes me dislike remaining in our apartment alone all night. Dicky not only knows this, but on his own account cherishes a strong disapproval of our enforced habitation. And while I knew that just now he was so angry that he mentally could consign me to all sorts of macabre tortures, yet a little later his innate chivalry would spur him to make sure that I was not left alone.

The reflection was salutary for me. It made my remorse for my own harsh words overshadow the remembrance of my husband's equally offensive vocabulary. But, above all else, I felt a load lifted from my heart.

I had not dared to look squarely at the things my own jealous imagination was picturing until the honest gossip of Mrs. Marks changed the aspect of the circumstances altogether. I might have cause for uneasy heartache in the future. I could not contemplate with equanimity the coming association of my husband and Madge Fawcett when he should transfer her exquisite and unusual loveliness to his drawing room, but just now, thanks to my flamboyant neighbor, I was comparatively at peace.

"You'll Help Me, Won't You?"
Suddenly I felt very tired—almost exhausted mentally and physically. I looked at my wrist-watch, and estimated that Lillian would not get to the apartment for another two hours at least. I would have time for a good, refreshing sleep before she came. I knew the signal she always gave—two long rings, separated by a short one—and as I crept into bed, after securely locking the doors of the living room and bedroom, I resolved that no other ring should receive the slightest attention from me.

I was sound asleep almost immediately, and came back with the sensation of being lifted from a deep gulf. Instantly in my ears was the shrilling of the doorbell, the prolonged, steady ring of some one keeping a finger unintermittently upon the bell and nearer still, outside my bedroom door, was an agonized whisper:

"Miss Graham! Miss Graham. Oh, for goodness sake, dearie, open the door!"

It was the voice of Mrs. Marks, and there was such terror in it that I sprang from bed and, unlocking my bedroom door, threw it open.

I shrank back in terrified astonishment at first, for what rushed past me into the room looked, in the dim light, like some immense, shaggy animal. Then a pile of something dark was heaved over my bed—and Mrs. Marks' face, ashen where the rouge did not mask it, stared into mine.

"Dearly, you'll help me, won't you?" she pleaded, dragging open my wardrobe doors and turning to the bed. "Please help me hang these things up. They'll never think of looking in here—well folks like you that can prove what you are!"

SYMBOLS

By Juanita Hamel

Why is it that the real secrets of life sometimes find their best expression, not in detailed explanation, but in symbols? There's something strangely intimate, too, about a symbol—especially if it's a heart symbol shared by only two of all the myriad millions in the world—it seems to COMPLETE the romance! Why, the RIGHT symbol can make even a dream a reality, and cause to seem a solid fact, the most evanescent and otherwise fleeting instant. Ah, half the magic lies in the correct choice of the symbol, doesn't it?

What Nosebleed May Mean in Certain Cases

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,

United States Senator from New York,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

ONE of the most annoying and inconvenient of small ailments is a sudden attack of bleeding from the nose.

You may be in the middle of an interesting conversation, or you may be hurrying to finish some important business, when—without the least warning—a red stream begins to trickle from your nose, and all else must be put aside while the emergency claims your entire attention.

Some persons are particularly susceptible to nosebleeds. Indeed, in some families there seems to be a hereditary tendency to recurrent attacks. It may come on at any time of the day or night, without any apparent reason. They may awaken from sleep with blood pouring from the nose.

It is, however, never a serious condition. "Epistaxis" is the name doctors give to bleeding from the nose, no matter whether it is due to an injury, such as a blow on the nose, or whether it is a symptom of some illness or other unhealthy condition.

Nasal catarrh is one of the commonest causes of nosebleeds. Growing and anemic children are especially susceptible to the symptoms.

Epistaxis is sometimes confounded with hemorrhage when the bleeding begins while the person is asleep and some of the blood is swallowed. In such a case it is quite natural for the blood to be vomited the next morning. The occurrence is likely to lead to unreasonable alarm, especially if the victim is a nervous or easily frightened person.

No matter what is the cause of the epistaxis, the first consideration must be to control it.

In most cases the bleeding stops of its own accord. If, however, it persists, there are simple measures that can nearly always be employed successfully.

Applications of cold water or of ice to the nose and back of the neck will check the bleeding in the majority of instances. If this does not do a very small amount of pulverized alum or tannic acid may be snuffed up the nose.

Rest is essential. The victim should lie down or sit in a comfortable chair with the head thrown back.

In rare cases it is necessary to have the nose plugged in order to stop the bleeding. Your doctor will do this for you if it is advisable.

Recurrent attacks of epistaxis are sometimes due to an ulcer in the nasal septum. When this condition exists it may be necessary to have the ulcerated spot touched with a caustic or the live cautery. This can, of course, only be done by the doctor.

In any case of recurrent or violent bleeding from the nose do not delay to consult your doctor. He may save you much annoyance, valuable time and even suffering.

Cramps are usually caused by over-exertion. I would suggest that you take hot baths, and massage the limbs. If this does not help you see your physician about this condition.

Here Are New Ways to Treat Materials for Fine Curtains

By WANDA BARTON

CURTAINS are always of interest and any new wrinkle is bound to receive consideration in schemes of decoration.

Quite new and unusual are the heavy net glass curtains, that hang the full length of the window under the shade, embroidered with wools. The work is done in conventionalized flowers in colors to match the decoration of the room, or the outer hangings.

For instance, glass curtains embroidered in yellow daffodils show through the outer curtains of ruffled net that hang under yellow sunfast drape, natural pines, mercerized cotton rep, or any of the other drapery materials. The colorful embroidery peeping through lends a decorative value to the color scheme.

Another odd fancy is the use of the plain wooden pole that is neatly covered with a piece of the outer hanging. This bands the top of the casement with the color instead of leaving the appearance of a wide separation between the side hangings. The brass rings are slipped over the pole, or wooden rings are painted with enamel to match, which is rather smarter than the brass.

Ruffled curtains are the fad of the moment. They are especially lovely in the thinner materials. As many as ten or twelve narrow ruffles two inches wide are run across the width above the hem, the space of a tiny hem apart, and the same are repeated across the top. They are very effective in thin chintz, silk, muslin and fine net. Another new note is to have a band of colored satin ribbon run through the hem of the glass curtains where the embroidery does not appear. This varied by the use of a gold or silver ribbon. The ribbons slip out and in easily when the curtains need to be laundered.

One very effective window in a black and white room had black Georgette glass curtains with silver ribbon run through the hems. The same material was used for the outer curtains, the silver ribbon being run through the side hems that were edged with narrow silver fringe. The outer draperies were of black taffeta embroidered with silver-thread motifs.

The effect was striking and as the room was sunny the black did not appear somber. The rug was dove gray, the furniture black wicker with gray and silver upholstery with a bit of black in it, the day-bed held enough wistaria, yellow, sage green and purple cushions to light the dullness if it were present.

Draperies of the straight East-lake cut are popular in linens embroidered in white or self colors. It costs but little to do them at home and as the work is coarse, they are made with the heavy flows, it goes easily and is very effective when finished. Sometimes the curtains are plain and only the broad ties are embroidered. If one is an expert in stencil work, many wonderful effects may be obtained with the linens. Batik and block printing is also an effective means of decoration.

Casement cloth, a close woven fabric in cotton or wool is occasionally found with a silk stripe, which makes it very pretty for draperies and modest in price. Armure is in either cotton or artificial silk. It is also mercerized, with an overshot design in polka dots or figures in self coloring. The material is wide and not expensive.

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES ABOUT Flowers in the Dark

Copyright, 1924, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

WELL, what do you think I found on the balcony this morning?—hyacinths, deep blue and creamy white and one of the deepest rose. No, not in the window box and not in a basket or in a bouquet sent by some loving heart to bring the promise of the Spring.

In quite a different place they were, very different indeed.

An old cask stands in the corner of the balcony shaded from the sun, and in that cask are the little garden tools that belong to the long window box and the attention to it, and when I stooped to get out a trowel—not because the window box really needed the trowel, but because I wanted to get my hands into the black earth for a few minutes—there, smiling up from the dark old cask, were the hyacinths, blooming in the dark.

Neglected and forgotten—the bulbs were there.

"In the Spring—"
I put them away myself with great care last fall.

"In the Spring," I thought, "we'll have some hyacinths." And then Winter came and the wind and the rain and from the balcony we could hear the great ships bawling through the fog and storm like herds of cattle coming plowing up the lane.

The eucalyptus tree below had a glorious Winter—he loves the wind, does the eucalyptus, and all the wind pranks and vagaries. Brother Boreas and the weeping willow rather disapprove of the wind, but he is wild, rough ways; they crouch down and get away from his rude caresses as well as they can.

Yes, there were wild storms in the Winter, and in the Spring came the fog. And all the world was full of strange rumors. New volcanoes lit their torches and terrified the astonished inhabitants.

Earthquakes shook the old world as a terrier shakes a frightened rat.

Wars and rumors of wars, battle, murder, sudden death, famine, pestilence, discord and misery.

And Spring Called
Yes, it was a sick old world and tired and worried—uprisings and revolutions, quarrels in the families of the nations, hatreds and old prejudices fanned into cruel flame—sometimes it was hard to understand how it would all come out.

And all at once—Spring stood upon the balcony and tapped at the glass in the long French windows.

"Get me in," said Spring. "I have come to visit you for a while."

And lo! all the hills that were so brown and tawny like lions crouching in the storm were suddenly green and the yellow poppies began to blow and the old Chinaman called from down below, "Daff-dills—vilets—spring flow."

And we went out on the balcony and watched the plants in the window garden take a long breath of rapture and start to grow.

offerings of his colleagues had vanished.

To-day, many hundred years after the seeds were planted, thousands of persons are being benefited by these shade trees and the seeds from these original cedar trees have caused new trees to grow up in the neighborhood, which in turn have provided many generations with the material for the construction of homes.

Winifred Black

And we forgot all about the hyacinths, never thought of them at all, left them in the dark old cask to wither and decay.

But the hyacinths had another notion.

They didn't care to wither, nor yet to decay, so they whispered to each other there in the dark and said, "Come on, let's grow anyway."

And here they are today, purple and cream white and deep rose—and when I set them in the window box with the rest of the Spring flowers, they nodded gaily and went right on growing, just as if we had taken care of them and cherished them as we had meant to do.

I wonder if somewhere in the gray and the dark some little kind word you or I have spoken to one in need of kindness will blossom suddenly into lovely flowers?

I wonder if some dark day we will find, you and I, to our surprise that something generous and good that we did long and long ago is blooming for us unexpectedly, and will grace our lives like the hyacinths—all purple and cream, white and deep rose.

Diary of a Fashion Model

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

She Describes a Beautiful Gown for Formal Dinners.

OUR dinner gowns this season are among our very best numbers," Madame remarked with satisfaction.

She had just finished watching the seamstresses put the last touches on a lovely model.

Gaby was acting as manikin, and she was enjoying herself hugely, strutting up and down the floor in the new frock.

"I think there's nothing in the world more fetching than black over flesh color," Gaby declared, as she waved her arm so the dainty cape floated out behind her.

"Yes," Madame agreed. "The beauty of black chiffon over flesh or black lace over flesh is hard to improve upon."

"Are you planning to have others that exploit this treatment?" I asked.

"I expect this model to be so well liked that I'll be forced to make others somewhat like it," Madame answered.

Just then a new client was ushered into the salon by one of the saleswomen.

"Mrs. Whiting would like a dinner gown, Madame," the saleswoman said, as she found a chair for the client.

"May I have another look at this adorable gown your manikin is wearing?" young Mrs. Whiting asked, all interest.

"Yes," you may," Madame informed her. "You're the first client to see it, as it has just been finished."

"How very unusual!" Mrs. Whiting exclaimed, as she held her head on one side.

"Madame, what makes that subtle pattern effect in the flesh foundation underneath?" she asked.

"I've used the flesh charm-meuse on both the dull and shiny sides, so that the yoke and a band through the waistline and through the skirt exploit the shiny surface, while the rest is dull," Madame explained.

"It gives a lovely effect, just showing through the chiffon as it does," Mrs. Whiting said approvingly.

"But the thing that catches my eye and makes me want to simply walk off with the gown is that

The cape was a layer of chiffon that fell from the shoulders of the sleeveless gown and was caught at either wrist by a deep band of the black chiffon.

"The effect of the wristbands, the floating cape and the sleeveless frock is stunning, indeed," Mrs. Whiting commented.

"May I be the first favored client to try on this beautiful frock?" she asked Madame with a smile.

I knew that a trial would mean she'd want to have one made like it and, sure enough, I was right.

"My! I shall have to hustle and sketch that pleated black lace over pleated flesh chiffon I've had in the back of my head," Madame said as she reached for her pencil.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

SUNDAY AND MONDAY, APRIL 13-14.

Sunday's horoscope is not propitious, holding possible danger through fire, loss or accident and forecasting trouble through quarrels or ill-temper.

In affairs of a social or affectional nature better forces prevail.

Those whose birthday it is have the prospect of a year of danger, says the seers. They should be careful of their persons and property.

Happy conditions may obtain in heart and home affairs. A child born on this day should be well disciplined.

Monday's astrological forecast is favorable for the fulfillment of the ambitions and for financial prospects. It would be well, however, to give close attention to attaching the signature to any sort of writing or document. Those whose birthday it is may have a prosperous year, but they should be careful in signing papers and contracts. A child born on this day will be successful and prosperous and will rise in life.

Advice to Girls

By ANNIE LAURIE

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a mother of two grown children, a son and a daughter, who are both very popular and have a wide circle of friends. They think I should entertain frequently for them. Now, as I am not very strong and unable to get help I cannot entertain as often as I would like. Both of them hold good and responsible positions and are very fond of having their friends enjoy home life with them.

My son sometimes teases me and tells me how only a place to stay. This makes me very sensitive and as I would like to have him stay home at night, I would like to have you suggest something to make him contented.

Now, as we have a large and modern home, with music of two kinds and all that should make home life pleasant, I am at a loss as to how I can get him to become interested in home, more. He is a very affectionate son, but just seems to like outside life.

When I entertain for my children they indulge in dancing which I do not like so please suggest something else in the line of amusement when I entertain for them.

AFFECTIONATE MOTHER.

Do not discourage your children from bringing their friends home. Encourage your son to bring his young friends to the house for dinner or to spend the evenings. Be just as young as they are. Make pals of your children and their friends. Find out their likes and dislikes and be as ready to enter into their schemes and fun as they themselves.

Most all young people dance nowadays and if you forbid it in your home, they may go out to dance, which would be more harmful than allowing them to do it at home where you can be with them. Just overcome your prejudice in this regard, and by encouraging your children to have their friends in their home, and not being too formal, you will find that they will make of you their confidante and best pal. Why not try a radio outfit to interest your son? Almost all boys are crazy about it now.

Annies Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. Letters to Miss Laurie should be addressed to her in care of this office.

Memorabilia of Famous Novelist Given Museum

All the memorabilia of George Sand, which were inherited by the granddaughter of the great novelist, Aureore Sand, have been bequeathed to the Carnavalet museum.

Letters, manuscripts of novels and numerous articles of extrinsic worth all are now on view in a part of the building called the "Museum George Sand," and the many admirers of George Sand, most of whom apparently haven't read her voluminous romances, are tripping out to the Carnavalet.

However, the article most characteristic of the author of "La Petite Fadette," a big black cigar, isn't in the collection, much to the disappointment of the visitors and also of the museum attendants, who are constantly being asked "whereabouts the cigars are."

Aureore Sand has come into the public eye not only because of her gift to the Carnavalet but also because she has just written a novel, "Encarnacion." The first book to appear under her own name, it has been received with considerable approval by the critics, who do not hesitate to say Aureore has inherited some of her grandmother's genius.—New York Tribune.

Webster's Life Policy Had Odd Restrictions

An interesting relic recently shown was the life insurance policy issued September 20, 1844, to Daniel Webster. It was for $5,000, which was considered a large sum in those days, and carried a premium of $293. The policy mentions certain restrictive clauses. If Daniel wanted to visit a large city, Washington included, or journey west of the Mississippi river, he had to get permission of the company and pay extra.

But Webster did not go into the wilds west of the Mississippi. He never had much use for that country, anyhow. The idea of the insurance company in imposing the limitations was that smallpox was likely to be epidemic in the large cities, while the Indians were the hazard of the West.

Webster was also advised that if he died in a duel, was hanged or killed in a raid upon any city or Indian tribe there would be no money for the widow.—Detroit News.

Whence Corn Came

It is generally believed that corn is a native of America. All evidence points to its having been cultivated by the Indians long before the discovery of this continent by Columbus, who is said to have introduced corn into Spain. However, representations resembling corn plants found in an ancient Chinese book have led to the belief that corn may have been indigenous to Asia also. It is also claimed that grains of corn were found in ancient ruins at Athens. But if corn had ever been known to the Asiatic and Europeans, it had not been cultivated for many centuries previous to its introduction into Europe by Columbus.

The nature of the "corn" mentioned in the Scriptures is only conjectural. It was probably some kind of small grain. In Europe various kinds of small grain, such as oats, wheat and barley, are called corn, and our corn is there always spoken of as Indian corn or maize. Maize is a corruption of the native name of corn in the West Indies.—Detroit News.

LEAGUERS SING AT METHODIST REVIVAL

The opening services at the Central Methodist church revival last night consisted of singing of "Onward Christian Soldiers" by Intermediate Epworth Leaguers, and a similar hymn led by the Senior Epworth League. The two leagues marched into the church auditorium as they sang and were seated in the middle aisle of the church. The singing marchers were followed by the junior missionary society of the church, all the last named company being under nine years of age.

The regular congregational singing preceded the church announcements as led by W. H. Makin, with Mrs. H. O. Troup at the piano. It was announced that following the children's meeting at the church at 11 o'clock today, the children would march in a body to the Louisville and Nashville railroad shops, where at noon the usual gospel meeting was held.

Sunday morning at the Sunday school, Dr. Hunter stated an opportunity would be given for any who desired to make definite public decision to join the church.

At 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon at the Central Methodist church Dr. Hunter will speak to men only, the "Hindicup of Life" being his announced subject. At 3 o'clock the same afternoon, a meeting for women only will be held at the Westminster Presbyterian church, with Mrs. Edith Hayes Meigs, leader.

Sunday night there is to be a general evangelistic meeting at the Central Methodist church.

"And they that were ready went in, and the door was shut," a sentence from the parable of the five wise and the five foolish virgins, was the text of Dr. Hunter's what proved to be a highly inspiring sermon. Dr. Hunter said his subject was: "The tragedy of the unprepared."

Some of the truth bearing sentences the preacher were:

"It takes a crisis to bring out character."

"Down the road there is a crisis waiting for you."

"We cannot see into the souls of men very clearly; but we know more about people than they think."

"The virgin torch beavers up to a certain place, were all the same."

"Some virgins were prepared. They could take a nap. The only persons who have time to take a nap are the prepared ones."

"He giveth His beloved sleep."

"An examination in school is something that tells who has studied."

"Character is nontransferable."

"Life's opportunities come at the most unexpected times."

"Not to be able to step in is the tragedy of the unprepared."

"I'm interested in the ground work, not the finishings."

"When a boy or girl has the opportunity to lay up ammunition for big things and don't use it, it's a shame."

"It stirs my blood when they tell me the Southern boys and girls haven't the equipment to fit them for the biggest things of life."

"The trained triumph."

"There is no trouble about the door of opportunity. It needs opening, that's all."

"If on some days you don't do certain duties, you will limp through life as a penalty."

"You can get the best, if the best is in you."

"If you can get on the campus, you can get through college."

"I got a job firing the college furnace."

"Don't tell me you can't."

"Get purpose in your souls not to fail. That is the first and best of the equipments for success."

Watercress a Valuable Food.

Scrubfield urges the greater use of watercress, which contains all three vitamins, as a food. Watercress is a cheap, green vegetable which, like lettuce, is eaten unspiced by cooking, but which, unlike lettuce, is available all the year round. Its more extended use may, therefore, be an appreciable help in remedying dietary errors caused by urbanization.—British Medical Journal.

Where Moses Was Found.

Opposite Cairo lies the Island of Roda, where, according to Arab tradition, Pharaoh's daughter found Moses in the bulrushes.
